

The Richard and Judy Book Club Message Board > Book Discussion > General Book Chat

UK publisher Pnuema Springs

User Name   Remember Me?
Password

Register   FAQ   Members List   Calendar   Today's Posts   Search ▾

 Post Reply

Thread Tools ▾   Search this Thread ▾   Display Modes ▾

04-03-2007, 10:47 AM

#1

reusergoatie

Debut Author

Join Date: Jan 2007
Posts: 10

 UK publisher Pnuema Springs

 Hi everyone,

I posted a few weeks ago to recommend a book i had come across called Mystery, Deceit and a School Inspector, the link which i had put in my post in the recommendations section. It has had quite a few viewings so maybe people are interested in reading this book, the story was certainly different to a lot of the mystery novels you read which seem to follow the same format and it had some humour as well. The site i had found this book on was an English publishing house called Pnuema Springs and since my post i have bought another book (An icy step to oblivion if you must know) and i am impressed with how quickly they dispatch anything i order, it certainly makes me think Amazon etc should learn to do this. My point here is that both these books have been really good and i think its refreshing to see home grown authors being able to put their wares out for the world to read and obviously be supported by lesser known publishing houses in the UK. Long may this continue and from the quality of the works i have read so far it looks like Pnuema Springs might be on to something here and it might not be too long before they are a well known name in this country. Their site is well worth visiting and they offer everything from children's books, fantasy, fiction, non-fiction and even religious stuff so here is the URL if you fancy having a look to make up you own decisions;
<http://www.pneumasprings.co.uk>

Long live English creativity!!!

Last edited by reusergoatie : 11-03-2007 at 10:05 AM.

 Quote

 Post Reply